The enduring value of 'Culture for Service'

WHEN I ATTENDED Goshen College, little did I understand the enduring value of my education, because it was not immediately apparent. Yes, I was accepted into several top graduate schools, and yes, I excelled academically in those programs. I am grateful to many good GC professors for that. But academic excellence was not the only enduring value.

Twenty-five years later, when I was in the midst of developing a global health experiential learning program at Cornell University, a close friend observed: "So, you are trying to make Cornell the Goshen College of the Ivy League?" We laughed aloud, but he was right. The enduring value of our motto, "Culture for Service," surfaced these decades later.

What we learn at Cornell or at Goshen College is much bigger than ourselves. My career became about having deep understandings of the places where my knowledge and discovery can be useful. To listen really carefully to, "what are the needs of the world?" And, "how can we respond to that creatively?"

That happens when students are put in situations of relating and interacting with the world, and then are challenged to think deeply about it — whether global or local, through an internship, service project or some sort of creative project, research, policy engagement, entrepreneurship or working on sustainable development in a community. Learning that connects the world with the best of the academy is truly exciting and transformative for our students.

Former Goshen College President J. Lawrence Burkholder wrote: "College mottos are usually innocuous. But at Goshen, 'Culture for Service' is a reality and needs to be affirmed at a time when a materialistic, technically oriented culture pulls in other directions."

This year we are renewing and deepening our commitment to "Culture for Service" through our new Center for Community Engagement (learn more on pages 5 and 14). True to Goshen College, this new center connects our liberal arts core curriculum with career networks and internships, summer camps for children with new programs for employed adults, and global education with local settings. It is an ambitious initiative that has already attracted significant funding.

What Goshen College distinctively adds to the educational equation is something that a public institution, or even a secular private university like Cornell, cannot: the mentorship and friendship of faculty rooted in the way of Jesus, in a learning environment shaped by the Anabaptist-Mennonite tradition. Where joy is cultivated and active love for God and neighbor is part of our mission.

That is our distinctive flavor, the saltiness that we persist in bringing to an increasingly materialistic and generic world of higher education, as well as to our local and global communities.

About the cover

Illustration by Hannah Gerig Meyer '08

Community engagement is rooted in a place and in its people. While this college may be more broadly known for its history of global community engagement, our local community engagement goes back to our founding in 1894 as the Elkhart Institute of Science, Industry and the Arts. Since then, Goshen College has played an important and enduring role in shaping the people and culture of Northern Indiana — and in particular, Elkhart County — but also being deeply shaped by this community we call home. This topographic map of part of Elkhart County represents the land, landmarks and pathways of this particular place, and the chain of purple paper people represent the partnerships and relationships we seek to build, hand-in-hand, together.

KULP HALL MEMORIES

Did you ever live in Kulp Hall? Built 115 years ago in 1906 as a women's dormitory, it is the oldest residence hall on campus. Kulp now serves as a co-ed facility that can house up to 68 juniors and seniors. We recently asked alumni and friends to share their favorite Kulp memories on social media; read some of their responses!

Sharon Risser '74
Freshman and Sophomore year; it was great. Wide halls, small rooms. Fire escape worked great when we came in after female curfew

Sharon Wilson '84
Yes! K2W. Friends for life. 💖 We graduated in '84, and still get together regularly, despite long distances. We attended each others' weddings, cried with and prayed for each other in crises, and now congratulate each other on the birth of grandchildren.

Ally (Hawkins) Stiffney '10
Climbing out on the little roof, stealing utensils, getting ready in the big bathroom, dance parties, staying up way too late, prank wars, roomie meals!! 😋

Lois Bare '79
My grandmother lived there in 1907. My daughter lived there 1987-88.

Kristina Everingham Kartikeyan '02
It's amazing how this picture evokes such cherished memories. Freshman and Sophomore years '98-'00 on the 2nd floor. My grandmother was there 60 years earlier and oh my, the scandalous stories she told! I'm only sad that my aunt and mother missed out on the joys of Kulp life.

Michelle Yoder Horning '91
Lived in the same room my mom lived in 30 years earlier.

Sammy Rosario '13
One time, roomies from downstairs came to our floor and inundated our floor with balloons 🎈 they even drew our faces on them. Pretty neat 😂

Steve Walter '87
Second Spring Term, Kulp 1 with roomie Anthony Beiler '89. Super hot summer month hanging out in a kiddie pool we bought at GL Perry? Held it to the roof of the car driving back to the dorm and plopped it in the lawn to cool off.

Melinda Spohn Beatty '97
Kulp was kinda magical, with its vines, squeaky floors and pretty balconies, which were great for journaling and watching the strange campus goings-on below. Adored my time there and the people I shared it with!

Sheryl Nespor '74
Kulp hall... small, cozy rooms. Tiny closets... Wide halls, close to dining hall. Character, history, charm!

Overall giving to totaled $10,371,785, which combines both unrestricted and designated giving. The GC Fund received $2,465,379, making 2020-21 the most successful year ever for the fund that provides immediate, dynamic and impactful support for GC students.

New Center for Community Engagement to grow local partnerships

Goshen College received more than $4 million in grants from Lilly Endowment, Inc., and more than $500,000 from the Community Foundation of Elkhart County to support the creation of the new Center for Community Engagement, building institutional capacity to address the career concerns of both traditional students and those in careers now disrupted.

The new center will increase educational access, engagement and attainment in Elkhart County for all learners, including at Goshen College, through new educational partnerships with and for the local community. This includes outreach to low-income, school-age students and adult learners. The five-year plan includes an ambitious proposal to advance the college and county through programs and partnerships.

Resuming SST presents challenges and opportunities

After a year-long Study-Service Term (SST) hiatus due to the pandemic, in which the office of international education reviewed and re-evaluated the program, 18 Goshen College students traveled to the Southwest United States during the summer to spend six weeks exploring the Navajo and Hopi cultures as part of a new SST unit called Southwest Indigenous Perspectives.

Before the pandemic, two off-campus immersive courses in the southwest were already in the works, hoping to appeal to students who might not be as able to travel abroad, such as international students or student-athletes. However, when COVID-19 led to the cancellation of SST units in Ecuador and Senegal, the planned off-campus courses became the inspiration for an alternative SST experience for students who still needed to complete their international education credits.

As further changes to global education at Goshen College take shape, sequential SST courses will be offered over the course of several semesters, including May or summer terms. In this model, at least two of the courses for "study" and "service" will be experiential and immersive courses on or off campus.

This fall, international SST resumed with a small group of students traveling to Ecuador.

Students develop local sensory trail app

Goshen College students have teamed up with the City of Goshen and ADEC Inc. to create an app as part of a sensory trail initiative to help connect individuals with disabilities to the health benefits and wonders of nature.

The sensory trail consists of two-mile stretches on both the Millrace and Abshire Park trails. The app has several features, such as identifying sounds on the trail, and will help to guide people along the trail using all the senses, said Jeanette Shown (left), associate professor of computing science and advisor on the project.

Gabrielle Vogeler (right), a senior computer science major from Rolling Prairie, Indiana, and Kevin Mazariegos-Perez (middle), a senior computer science major with a minor in game design, from Elkhart, Indiana, programmed the app.

New entrance added on College Avenue in first of two phases

The first phase of a new entrance project to the Goshen College campus is underway at College Avenue and 10th Street, requiring the removal of one house with plans to remove a second house next year.

The creation of a new more prominent entrance from College Avenue is part of the college's long-term campus master plan and will provide easier access to the Music Center and meet the requirements by the city for a railroad quiet zone.

The future second phase of this entrance project will involve landscaping, signage and further road development to make this the primary campus entrance from College Avenue, in addition to the Welcome Center entrance from Main Street.

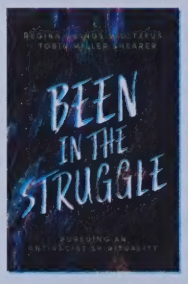
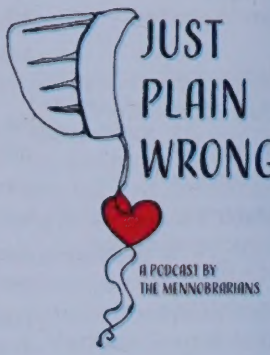
Mishler, who holds the school record in outdoor high jump with 6 feet, 8 inches, and was the first-ever GC high jumper to earn NAIA All-American honors, has coached Grewe since 2015. This often meant back-to-back practices with the Maple Leafs, followed by one-on-one time with Grewe.

Faculty release new books



Regina Shands Stoltzfus '84, professor of peace, justice and conflict studies, has co-authored the new book "Been in the Struggle: Pursuing an Antiracist Spirituality" (Herald Press, Nov. 2021). Written with Tobin Miller Shearer, professor of history and African American studies at the University of Montana, "Been in the Struggle" nurtures, challenges and fosters the work and witness of dismantling racism for the long haul.

John D. Roth '81 has published a new book, titled "A Cloud of Witnesses: Celebrating Indonesian Mennonites" (Herald Press, Sept. 2021), detailing the history of three streams of Anabaptist-Mennonite church groups in Indonesia, tracing the 170-year history of Mennonites in Indonesia alongside the larger cultural and religious history of the country.



Librarians co-host 'Just Plain Wrong' podcast

During the past year, three current and former Goshen College librarians, Erin Milanese, Abby Nafziger '06 and Tillie Yoder '12, have co-hosted the "Just Plain Wrong" podcast, in which the three Mennonite librarians review depictions of Amish, Mennonites and other Plain groups in fictional works such as Amish romance novels and historical films.

More than 30 episodes in, the three have hit their stride and grown their fanbase, and learned a lot about Anabaptist fiction in the process.

"Just Plain Wrong" can be heard on most podcast platforms. Follow them on Facebook, Twitter & Instagram @plainwrongpod.

New Fisher Terrace embodies John & Pauline Fishers' legacy

John J. '48 and Pauline Clemens Fisher '48 left a lasting impact on Goshen College. As a longtime professor of English, John's love of words and connection to Irish poetry are threads that continue to weave through the fabric of campus today.

As a testament to their legacy, family, friends and former students dedicated a new Fisher Terrace, built in the Fishers' honor during Homecoming Weekend.

Through a charitable donation from the John and Pauline Fisher estate, the outdoor area immediately east of the Leaf Raker Café in the Union Building has been renovated as a dining and gathering space, with a new pergola and seating. The terrace will also soon incorporate poetry displayed around the surrounding garden, including some by Irish poets that John connected with on campus and on classes he led to Ireland.

John and Pauline's daughters, Susan Fisher Miller '80 and Margaret Aeschliman '87, are also GC alumni, as are four of their grandchildren, including Peter Miller '09 who follows in John's footsteps as an assistant professor of English at Goshen College.

To honor their parents' legacy beyond the endowed scholarship they left, the Fisher family also wanted to enhance a campus common space and promote conversation and fellowship among all members of the campus community. Thus, they dreamt up the idea for the Fisher Terrace.

"When you're grabbing a sandwich on the way to teach class or finish a paper, you can pause on the terrace for poetry and conversation with friends," said Fisher Miller. "It's a nice fusion of culture and service our parents would have appreciated."

AN INTRODUCTION

BY Erika Buhring, Suzanne Ehst, David Kendall, Jan Shetler '78, Duane Stoltzfus '81 — the directors of the Center for Community Engagement

Community engagement has been central to Goshen College since our founding, and our motto "Culture for Service" captures it well. But it was explicitly affirmed in 1968 when the faculty unanimously voted to require a service-focused international semester in the core curriculum. After 52 years, our commitment to community engagement has grown only stronger.

However, much of this past engagement with partners has largely been in the service of the institution and our students. The Center for Community Engagement (CCE) was created this year to propel the college further into the next phase of community-based initiatives, centralizing reciprocal partnerships that advance work in the community in the context of our students' learning.

The CCE will provide guidance, training and resources to strengthen the work already being done with community partners. Currently, each major at the college requires a practicum that sends students out to apply their work in the world, and many of our adult and graduate students are already deeply invested in community jobs as they advance their education. Some courses visit partners to enhance student learning and assist the organization's work too. Many alumni host student interns or make connections that enhance career paths. Study-Service Term requires a six-week, service-learning assignment, and first-year students have an annual service day in their Identity, Culture and Community class. Additionally, courses for continuing education in Spanish and industry skills are offered. The CCE will support all of these programs to re-examine, expand and solidify reciprocal partnerships to respond more effectively to the needs of the community in the context of this existing work.

In addition, we will develop new partnerships that will have an identifiable impact on the well-being of people in our local region, and particularly in Elkhart County. We will increase place-based activities that work with local partners to address the issue of the low rate of access to education. We're reaching out to partners in neighborhoods with the lowest post-secondary educational attainment rates, where income, race and ethnicity are correlated. A first step has been to listen to these partners so that expanding educational access for the residents themselves is at the heart of our initiatives. From that work new partnerships will be identified that bring together the needs of the community with opportunities for engaging our students in meaningful, place-based learning initiatives. Thus, experiences will flourish for years to come through passionate community-based partnerships.

FROM THE EDITOR

Our mission begins: "Goshen College transforms local and global communities..." It is also true that our local and global communities transform us.

As we ponder our local community engagement, we ask: What would Elkhart County be like if Goshen College had never been formed? And how different would Goshen College be if it began somewhere other than here in this land filled with diverse people — from Amish to Evangelicals, from Appalachian migrants to Mexican immigrants, from artists to manufacturers — who are exceptionally community minded?

Meet our students and local alumni who demonstrate what community engagement looks like, how it happens and what kind of an impact it can have — on us and the people we engage with.

How our students engage the community

Meet six students who have had unique college opportunities to learn experientially and connect with the local community at the same time.

Music for Social Change — a minor program of study or concentration at the college and the first undergraduate program of its kind — is designed to intersect with initiatives in Elkhart County and to give students experiential learning opportunities to use music education for youth to help bring about social change.

Petenei Tacü '22

music major | Phesama, India

"In my country, we teach math, we teach science, but it is primarily the wealthy students who receive music lessons. My parents taught me to give back to the community, and taking Music for Social Change made my focus clearer. This course made sense to me, and I connected with it personally. Part of my internship was spent in the GC Leaf Alive Camp for local school children this summer. I saw how normally quiet kids responded when they heard music that represented their cultural heritage.

After my studies, I want to return to India. We need a purpose in life, and my purpose is to help children learn and experience music, while preserving our culture, and inspiring social change."

The college's Laboratory Kindergarten has been in operation by Goshen College since 1959, and joined in a partnership between the Education Department and Goshen Community Schools in 2008. Education students work alongside the teacher as they complete field experiences in the kindergarten.

"The most impactful piece of working in the College Kindergarten for me this year has been the power of connection. I get to see scaffolding for students with exceptional needs, like I've been learning about in my Exceptional Learners class. In another class I learn about the development of language and writing in young students, and I get to watch this development firsthand by observing writers' workshops.

Through observing the College Kindergarten, I've been challenged to think critically about classroom design, and the power of co-teaching. I've learned about the role of collaboration in early educational settings, and I've been an active participant through planning lessons, and working individually with students. The connections I've built with professionals, and with the children themselves, have truly reinforced my passion for working with younger students. The College Kindergarten is one of so many ways the teacher education program at Goshen has given me the opportunity to connect my learning in the classroom with real experiences in the broader community."

The Sustainability Leadership Semester (SLS) at the college's Merry Lea Environmental Learning Center is a 13-week fall semester, residential program for undergraduate students that explores the many ways we can contribute to sustainable, resilient futures for our communities in the midst of our rapidly changing planet. Students discover the sustainability of places through canoeing 70 miles from the top of the watershed at Merry Lea to Lake Michigan, hiking trails, and interacting with various community members and sustainability professionals. Within SLS, students dig into personal leadership development while also reading widely to connect with insights and ideas from diverse disciplines.

Emma Zuercher '23

"My experience as a participant in the Sustainability Leadership Semester (SLS) at Merry Lea helped shape the lens through which I see the world. I saw how sustainability — a word I found confusing and undefined prior to my SLS experience — applies not only to environmental issues, but to culture, social and environmental justice, language, art and community. Sustainability is inherently interdisciplinary and that means it's woven into every aspect of my life no matter what my career path looks like.

Our canoe trip, treks through the many ecosystems at Merry Lea and conversations with people of diverse perspectives, shifted my understanding of relationships. I learned to see that community is not only inclusive of all people but is much broader than the human world. My neighbor is the egret on the wetland, the bluestem grass in the prairie and the deer in the forest. All beings must be included in creating a world that supports us now and those who will live after us. Sustainability comes in many forms and is meant for everyone."

All nursing majors have the opportunity to gain plenty of hands-on learning through a variety of opportunities for nursing clinical experiences, including many right across the street at one of the best hospitals in Northern Indiana — Goshen Hospital. During the pandemic, the nursing majors were even able to have first-hand experience caring for COVID patients and helping manage a very difficult health crisis.

Kiprop Kiprotich '22

nursing major | Eldoret, Kenya

"Caring and learning through the pandemic was a battle we fought hard. No matter how much we tried, it was difficult to win. We were always tired, but that never stopped us from serving and learning from our community. As a nursing assistant and student, I felt consumed. All the stress from taking care of my patients, performing CPR, seeing my patients and their families cry almost broke me. I had lost my bearing, but that wasn't a reason to not care. It's so hard to operate under exhaustion, guilt or fear of COVID-19. I remember all my patients; some were too young to die, but we couldn't save them. Being from a culture that rarely talks about death, it was traumatizing to have end-of-life discussions, but I couldn't avoid it. My dying patients taught me alot: to be grateful and prayerful. Those lessons still keep me going. Out of everything I've done or will ever do, nothing can compare to the joy and fulfillment of seeing my patients going home, especially from the ICU after spending weeks on the ventilator and being intubated. These were people from my community. I was always ecstatic releasing them to their families. The college and local community has given me so much that I felt I could return the favor by serving it and caring for its people."

During the summer of 2021, the new Southwest Indigenous Perspectives Study-Service Term (SST) unit was the first domestic SST for the college. After taking several study courses on campus to prepare, 18 students spent six weeks exploring the Navajo and Hopi cultures, as well as leading the summer math and reading camps at the Peace Academic Center in Arizona.

Anna Smucker '22

graphic design major | Goshen

Initially, I had signed up for the Ecuador SST because I was excited about applying my Spanish knowledge and language in a different context. When the Ecuador SST was canceled [due to the pandemic], I chose this SST course because I hadn't learned a lot about Indigenous Peoples in a global context and I wanted to know more about Navajo and Hopi people. Also being able to travel, hike, and explore the mountains with a group sounded like an added bonus!

When we first stayed with host families on the Navajo Reservation, I was immediately struck by my host family's hospitality as they welcomed us into their homes as strangers. After asking questions and doing a lot of listening and learning, I remember being told a lot about the daily challenges that my host sister and mom faced over the years for being Native American, such as discrimination, hatred and prejudice. Yet, this was balanced out by stories of their incredible strength and courage to keep pushing on. I felt honored to be in a household with three generations of women who showed us nothing but patience, strength and kindness.

Opened in 2020, the Center for Communication Studies at Goshen College brings together the award-winning television, radio, print and other media curriculars under one roof. Students are able to meet in one place and collaborate as one team. A department that has won a steady stream of statewide and national awards has found a new home with high energy and round-the-clock activity, with Globe Radio announcers on the air and student staff in a bustling newsroom.

Gabriella Klopfenstein '22

The Center for Communication Studies has become my second home. I've had the opportunity to hold many leadership positions, but most recently as president of Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA) and the student station manager of 91.1 The Globe, our student-run radio station on campus. In these various leadership roles, I have experienced more than just on-campus opportunities. For my internships, through connections from PRSSA, I worked with organizations from Goshen and Elkhart. These opportunities not only shaped my skills and helped me find my true passion, but also gave me mentors and friends. My time in the communication department has fostered my love of learning, new relationships and prepared me for my future.

Zulma Prieto '01

Co-editor and co-publisher of El Puente, English as New Language teacher

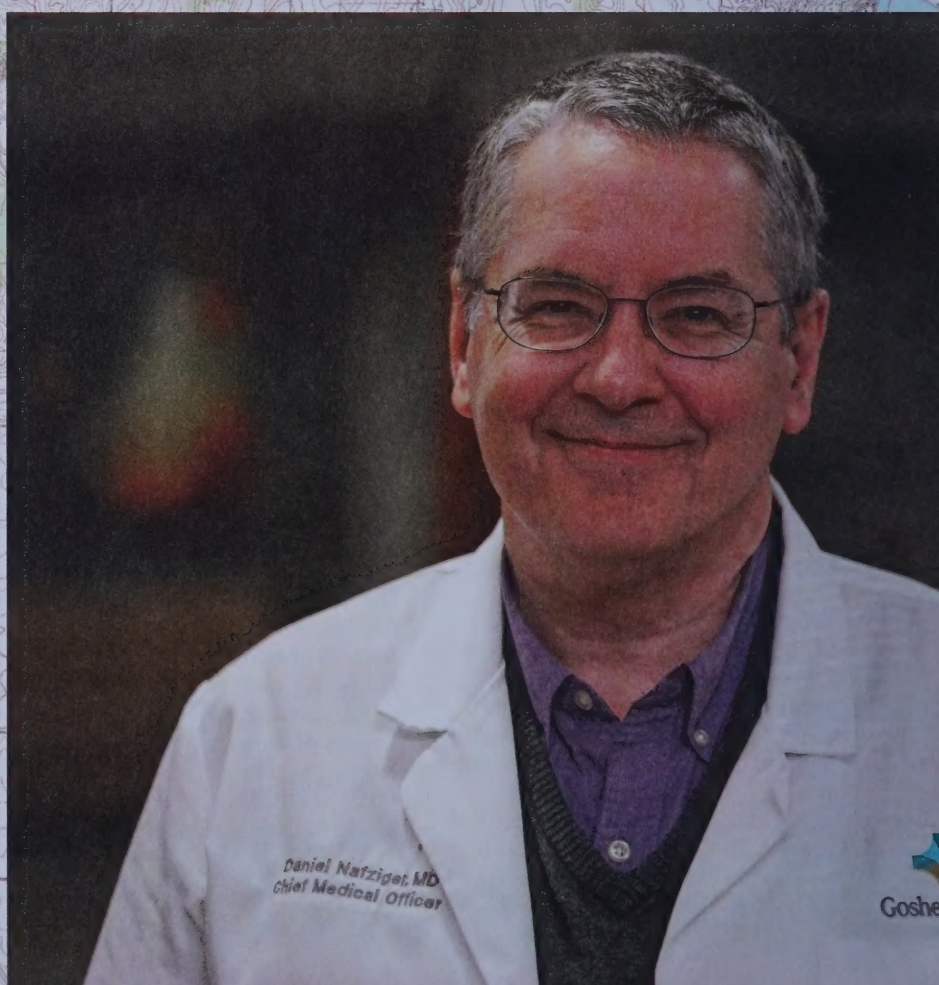
After moving to Goshen from Colombia in 1990, Zulma Prieto '01 and her husband Jimmer Prieto started "El Puente," a bilingual newspaper serving northern Indiana in 1992. With family and friends, the Prietos used their publication to build bridges in Hispanic and Anglo communities. They also taught young people and adults over the decades and helped create a range of community groups.

"After we gave our lives to the Lord in Colombia, this is where he sent us to serve. We were tools of his will and we hope we have served well. We were able to work with people from across the world in this community and with different churches and groups. It's a matter of community in love. This is more than justice. When you work with justice, you have to choose sides. When you choose to work for love, you're committed to everyone. You have to listen and learn and work alongside others, even if you don't completely agree with them. We learned a lot and had a lot of help from others. You start work on the shoulders of what others have done and we hope that others can work on the shoulders of what little we have done."

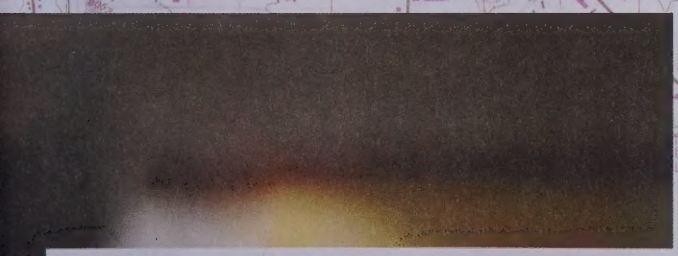


Kevin Deary '00

President and CEO, Boys & Girls Clubs of Elkhart County

Kevin Deary '00 came to Goshen from Boston in 1994 to be the executive director of the Goshen Boys & Girls Club. He became president and CEO of the Boys & Girls Clubs of Elkhart County in 2005 and oversaw the addition of three new clubhouses in Middlebury, Nappanee and Elkhart. Prior to the pandemic, the organization served more than 4,000 youth a year. He is also a new member of the Goshen College Board of Directors.

"Making sure our kids are healthy and have the support they need is a key part of building a healthy community. We do that by providing safe places for kids, by helping families and parents partner with the schools, by working with the court system. It's important to connect with kids and provide hope and inspiration in a genuine way for kids who don't have it or don't see it. I help teach staff and inspire volunteers to carry out that work of helping kids."



Dan Nafziger '83

Chief medical officer and infectious disease consultant for Goshen Hospital; former health officer for the Elkhart County Health Department

Dan Nafziger '83 has been a leader in the community during the COVID-19 pandemic. His role involves assisting Goshen Health in improving the health of the people it serves and also keeping its colleagues safe and healthy. The administrative part of Dan's job has an aspect of making sure that people with the right credentials are providing care for their patients, as well as ensuring that the hospital provides high quality care. Being a part-time practicing physician, when at times most of the hospital's inpatients had COVID, meant trying to educate other doctors on how to care for patients as new information became available.

"As a former public health officer, longtime infectious disease doctor and hospital administrative leader, it is easy to see how I might be uniquely positioned to have a positive impact on my community's response to COVID-19. I tried to provide an early alert to our health department and my health system so that we could prepare for what was to come and then learn all I could for the best science-based response. I wanted to be able to provide a level of care for our patients that was no different than organizations with many infectious disease physicians.

When I attended Goshen College, its five core values of Christ-centeredness, passionate learning, servant leadership, compassionate peacemaking and global citizenship had not been officially adopted but were already part of what was taught in support of a 'Culture for Service' worldview. Those values drive the 'why' of my personal response to this very day."

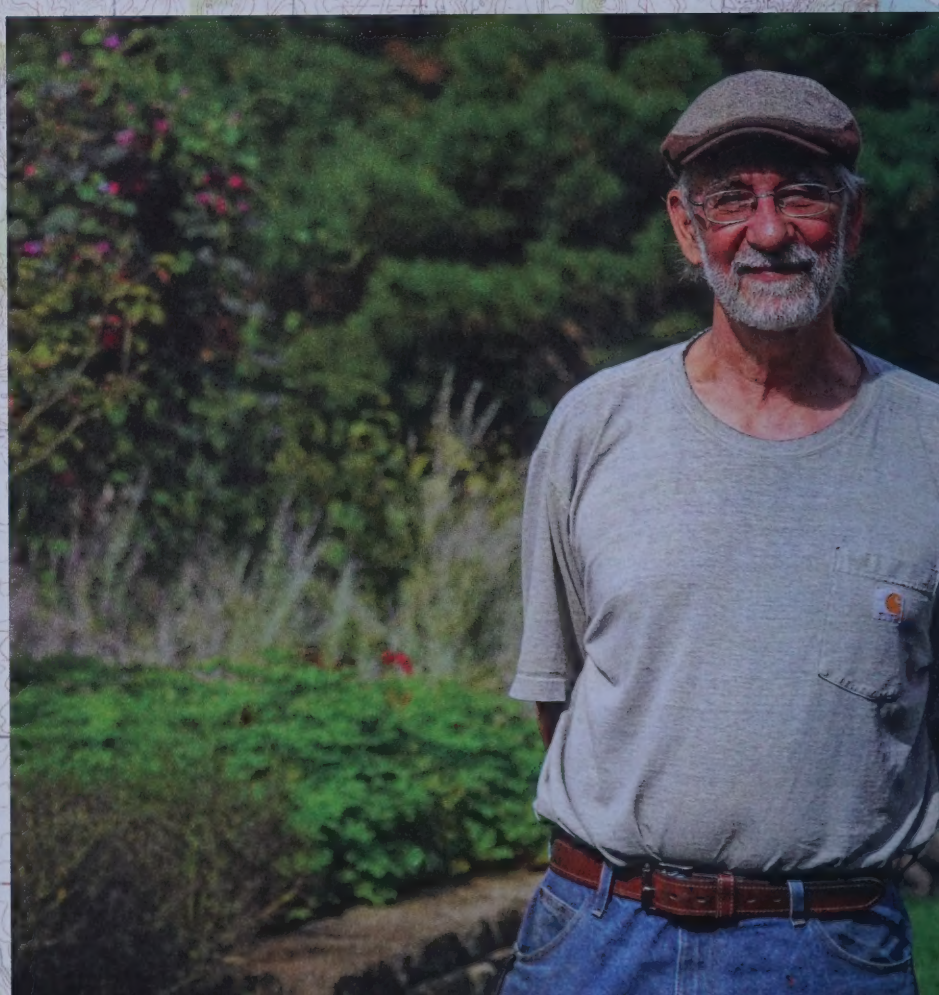
Mary Ellen Meyer '54

Co-creator of Millrace Cohousing Neighborhood, Goshen

Mary Ellen Meyer '54 had lived in the Shanklin Park Millrace neighborhood for 50 years with her husband Al Meyer '50, long before it was even called that. They loved the neighborhood with its intergenerational mix, and wanted to live there as long as they could. Mary Ellen became a leader in establishing a 14-unit cohousing development with the front doors of small individual houses facing center lawns, rain gardens, shared parking and gathering spaces. They began the journey to share the idea, form a group, attend a myriad of meetings with the city to further their proposal, work with a contractor and begin to literally build community which is now almost complete (most of whom are also GC alumni) along the Goshen Millrace Canal near downtown.

"I believe that the best way I can work at bringing in the kind of world God intended is to build relationships and to try to follow the example of Jesus in ways to work in that direction. To me, this means respecting the value of each person, learning ways to listen to others respectfully even if I don't agree, and being willing to change my own opinions when cooperation benefits the whole community. I have learned that working together accomplishes more than each faction working to benefit itself. And I think that for me, 'thinking globally and acting locally' is the best I can do."



Rafael Barahona '01

Partner at LightBox in Goshen

Rafael Barahona '01 first arrived in Goshen from Canada in 1993 and started his freshman year at Bethany Christian High School. The shift was initially a very difficult one, but over the years, Rafael has grown to love Goshen. He and his family moved back in 2012 and Rafael has firmly embedded himself in the community. He has served on the Mayor's Arts Council, the Latino Advisory Committee and is joining the board of the Goshen Chamber of Commerce. Rafael is a partner at LightBox, a design studio that provides visual identity and branding services to local nonprofits as they do important work in the community.

When I came back to Goshen nearly ten years ago, I had absolutely no idea how I would get involved. I have always had a penchant for creative work, but only really discovered design after I had already graduated from Goshen College with my psychology degree. After coming back to Goshen from Virginia, the community was simultaneously familiar and a new landscape. It was such an encouraging community and I felt almost pushed into starting my own business. As it developed, I really wanted to lean into making a difference in the community and getting beyond 'making things look nice.' I have felt really blessed to work alongside amazing clients who are already doing good work where I live, work and play.

Jon Cutrell '75

Designer and gardener of DeFries Gardens, also known as "the Calendar Garden," near New Paris, Indiana

Jon Cutrell '75 became friends with Elizabeth DeFries, who had lived in an old brick farmhouse with her husband, Dr. John DeFries. When John died, she donated the 13-acre property east of New Paris, Indiana, to Elkhart County Parks, and later funded its development. Their friendship eventually resulted in Jon becoming the designer and gardener of the Calendar Garden, a one-acre showpiece that reflects the four seasons of northern Indiana. The unique flowering calendar is enjoyed by many visitors year-round.

I have enjoyed interaction with the natural world since I was a child. For me it is both a spiritual experience as well as an aesthetic one. After majoring in art at Goshen College, I found that work in landscape design was a good combination of these interests. During the summers there I worked at a local landscape company which gave the added benefit of hands-on experience. For several decades I was happy to do a wide variety of jobs for individual customers as well as various institutions but eventually was drawn to working more with public space. One project that fascinated me was the idea of making a garden that would be based on my visualization of the annual cycle of the seasons. I have been happy that the Calendar Garden has become a way for local people to appreciate the way we fit into the cycles of nature that we all experience.

Arvis Dawson '76

Elkhart City Council member and retired educator

After graduating from Goshen College, Arvis Dawson '76 worked as a social worker and then as a teacher for 31 years in Elkhart Community Schools. He is serving his eighth term on the Elkhart City Council, a total of 28 years so far in two different stints, and formerly worked for the Elkhart mayor on the Board of Works. He is currently serving as a member of the Goshen College Alumni Council.

"My parents were always part of a group helping me and motivating others. When I became an adult, I saw it was something I needed to do because it was done for me. When you grow up in Chicago in a community that large, you don't see things happen, you hear about them happening. In Elkhart and Elkhart County, you see things happen. Once you realize you can have an impact on making those things happen, it becomes a natural thing.

Goshen College helped because it simply gave me opportunities I never would have had if I hadn't attended college there. I tell people all the time, Goshen College changed my life. I believe it was faith that got me there and helped me succeed. People there, some of the first people I encountered who were Caucasian, treated me in a Christ-like way."

President and CEO of Oaklawn

Laurie Neumann Nafziger '78, MSW, ACSW, is president & CEO of Oaklawn, the leading community mental health center for Elkhart and St. Joseph counties. She has been with Oaklawn for 34 years and her current role is to ensure quality services while positioning the organization for the future. Mental health and substance use treatment have long been important to the community's health, but as the need continues to grow, these services are all the more vital.

"It's an exciting time to be in mental health. We are expanding prevention and early intervention services, knowing we can reduce the severity of illness and substance use by moving our efforts further upstream. We're embracing consumer voice and lived experience, recognizing that clients bring valuable insight to the treatment process. And we're learning new ways to deliver services that will help more people get faster access to care when they need it. I love this work as I've been surrounded by bright and caring people who engage in the sacred work of walking with others on a journey of healing."

President and CEO, Lacasa Inc.

Chris Kingsley '04 has been president and CEO at Lacasa, a nonprofit community development organization working in Elkhart County, for three years (previously led by Moses Beachy '57, Arden Shank '74 and Larry Gautsche '74). Lacasa is a 51-year-old agency founded from a concern for the housing conditions of migrant farm workers. Over the decades it has expanded activities and focus in the areas of housing and community empowerment services. It has elevated the standard of housing in the community and offers a full schedule of classes and one-on-one financial empowerment services to help build community.

"I resonate strongly with the idea of unlocking God-given potential. In my work in the community, I get to see that through restoration and repurposing of buildings, revitalization of neighborhoods, and, most rewardingly for me, strengthened individuals and households. The best way for me to capture my 'why' is to ask people to think about those moments when you see a light turn on for someone and all of a sudden there is hope. That moment when hope enters a person — or even a neighborhood — is so powerful and something that really inspires and motivates me. As we walk alongside people attaining goals they thought were out of reach, we do not own or create the potential, but we get to be a part of releasing it. I'm wired to cheer people on, and working with Lacasa gives me a way to do this."

Allan Kauffman '71

Former mayor of the City of Goshen; member of the Goshen Community Schools Board of School Trustees

Allan Kauffman '71 was mayor of Goshen from 1997 to 2015. During his time as mayor, he focused on quality of life initiatives, believing that community development is economic development. He also helped the growing community navigate race relations. Prior to that, he had been on the Goshen City Council for 16 years. He has been a member of Goshen Noon Kiwanis for 47 years and started serving on the Goshen Community Schools Board of School Trustees in 2021.

I am following in my dad's footsteps. My father, Paul, was the first blue-collar worker to serve on the Goshen School Board. My family also volunteered for a lot of things in our community, so I continue to find ways to do that. The late Jerry Trolz used to often say 'Service is the rent we pay for life on earth.' Goshen College taught me the value of 'Culture for Service' and how to do that in the place I loved. Being mayor wasn't a sacrifice because I believe in the power of co-creating in our country. There are many passionate and talented people here that have made Goshen what it is today. I have an emotional attachment to Goshen, so when people asked what my vision was for the city, I said it sounds trite, but my vision is that it's always a place we're proud to call 'home.' Because if others see that, they'll want it, too.

Tavi Mounsithiraj '94

Co-founder of Goshen Soccer Academy

Tavi Mounsithiraj '94 has spent most of his adult life helping to successfully grow a love and passion for the sport of soccer in and around Goshen. He started playing soccer at Goshen College in 1991 and coach Dwain Hartzler '71 also asked him to help coach in the Goshen Youth Soccer Organization. After graduating, Tavi became an assistant coach on the GC Men's Soccer Team and then was head coach from 2001 to 2013. As a culmination of a life devoted to soccer and the local community, he and others founded the Goshen Soccer Academy in 2019 where he is now part-owner and co-manages the facility with Kyle Stiffney '10, whom Tavi coached since he was eight years old all the way through college.

I am who I am today because of Dwain Hartzler and what he did in soccer. I'm just trying to continue what he started in this area. I wouldn't be who I am today without Goshen College, what I learned and the people along the way. Dwain sought me out as a student-athlete and gave me the opportunity to play soccer and get an education.

Chad '89 and Tracy '90 Klopfenstein

Co-owners of The Chief in Goshen and Granger, Indiana; Tracy is also an art teacher at Concord Junior High School and Chad is vice president of engineering at Nishikawa Cooper LLC

The Chief started as a small ice cream shop in Goshen in 1962, and Chad '89 and Tracy '90 Klopfenstein joined the ownership team in 2018. Chad's business and engineering skills, combined with Tracy's creativity and connections to school-aged employees, have allowed them to continue The Chief's popularity in Goshen and to expand, opening a new store in Granger this year.

When we purchased The Chief, we felt strongly that we were to continue their long-standing tradition of giving back to the community. This community has fully supported this business. It is important to us to support local charities that provide services to the people of Goshen and Elkhart.

Fostering community begins with our staff, and we strive to provide a fun, supportive environment for our young workers, many of whom we watch learn skills in their first job. We love seeing the community gather at our business. There is a spirit of camaraderie and happiness. Just watching the children — Blue Moon ice cream smeared on their faces — playing tag can put a smile on anyone's face. Our slogan is 'Make the world a sweeter place,' and that is what we are trying to do, one scoop at a time.

Teaching and learning about identity, culture and community

EVERY FALL, I have the privilege of co-teaching a section of the general education course that all first-year students take called Identity, Culture and Community, or ICC as it's commonly known on campus. This course has replaced the colloquium course that students took for decades.

Over eight years of co-teaching, I've seen the evolution of the course from what was a bumpy start to a course with solid student evaluations. We have honed the course to help answer the important question: *How do people with diverse identities live together in a vibrant community? What could be more important and relevant than that in our fractured world?

Through a set of common readings and discussions, students are challenged — the first time for many — to think deeply about their own identities and how those are shaped by their communities and the cultures around them. We read:

- Make Your Home Among Strangers, a novel by Jennine Capó Crucet about a first-generation student struggling and ultimately learning to thrive in a collegiate academic environment and how that shapes her identity
- Citizen: An American Lyric, a book of poetry by Claudia Rankine dealing with some of the most challenging racial concerns of our time and the past
- Monique and the Mango Rains, a Peace Corps memoir by Kris Holloway set in Mali, a former Study-Service Term (SST) host country

Along the way, our ICC section gets a chance to do service together, share times of fellowship outside of the classroom and just build a learning community. Each section is intentionally selected to represent the diversity of our student body and in that way we can safely challenge and support each other as we learn about our differences.

I could go on and on about this course and my belief in its relevance to our world, but I'd be remiss to not acknowledge that teaching this course has also deeply impacted my own thinking about my identity, my communities and the cultures in which they lie. As an assignment, I'd encourage you to read our common texts and dream with us of a world where the diversity in our cultures and communities is not only welcomed, but is part of what we cherish most about them.

He married Sara Ann Kauffman in 1955, and began supporting his family as a trucker before attending Goshen College, earning a history degree in 1960. He received a master's degree in history in 1961 and doctoral degree in U.S. social history in 1966 from the University of Wisconsin.

Schlabach taught history at GC from 1965 to 1998. Though he officially retired from teaching in 1995, he continued to teach part-time into the early 2000s and pursued scholarly research and writing much longer. He is the author of five books and editor of more, including an acclaimed four-volume history of Mennonites in America.

He and Sara twice led SST in Costa Rica. He also led classes in Europe and traveled to China.

Along with his parents, Ezra and Vivian, he was preceded in death by his wife Sara, two brothers, Dale '66 and J. Richard '69, a sister, Eudean Broni, a brother-in-law, Paul Shaum, and a grandson, Brock Birky. He is survived by a daughter, Kristina Johnson; three sons, Gerald (Joetta '80) Schlabach '79; J. Carlyle (Julie Birky '85) Schlabach '81; Roderic (Mary Beth '87) Schlabach '86; seven grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; two sisters, Ruth Shaum '62 and Arleta (Phil '72) Kilmer; a brother, Dorvin (Ruth) Schlabach, Goshen; a brother-in-law, Emil Broni '72; and a sister-in-law, Viv Schlabach '65.

MERVIN ZOOK '59

(1937-2021)

Former associate director of college relations and director of communications

Mervin D. Zook '59, former associate director of college relations and director of communications, died Aug. 29, 2021, surrounded by his family. He was 84.

A 1959 graduate of Goshen College, Zook earned graduate degrees from Indiana University and the University of Notre Dame. He began his career at Goshen College in 1964 in the college relations office before moving into the role of director of communications, where he worked until 1978. He also spent part of his career at Mennonite Mutual Aid (now Everence) and retired from the Elkhart County data processing department.

In his retirement years, he was an active volunteer at College Mennonite Church and Greencroft. He was always willing to lend a helping hand to neighbors needing computer assistance. He was a learning enthusiast and took classes on a wide range of academic topics throughout his life. He strived to practice a healthy lifestyle, which included being an avid bicyclist.

He is preceded in death by his wife, Joan (King) '57; parents Ellrose D. and Frances (Loucks) Zook; and twin brother, Merlin W. Zook '59. He is survived by three daughters, Cynthia J. Zook '84, Susan D. (Kevin Gross '83) Zook and Wendy A. Zook.

This fall, 147 of our students (18% of the student body) are children of Goshen College alumni. We celebrate this passing on of "Culture for Service" from one generation to the next!

Ways you too can help grow Goshen

Donate! With your generous contributions to the Goshen College Fund and Student Aid Fund we are able to make the "Distinctively Goshen" experience accessible for all students. goshen.edu/give

Referrals are one of our top sources for students who end up enrolling. Refer students to us who have not heard of or considered Goshen College (and make sure we have contact info for your own high school children/grandchildren), but whom you think would value this learning experience and community. goshen.edu/refer

Organize a group of high school students in your area (or your own children/grandchildren) and bring them to campus for a visit. The Admissions Office can help with your planning and with travel reimbursement. goshen.edu/visit

Pray regularly for our admission counselors on the road, prospective students traveling for a visit and for those making decisions at the college.

Investing in the community, ahead of the curve

BY JOE SPRINGER '80, curator, Mennonite Historical Library

UPON HER COLLEGE graduation and with support from her local congregation Assembly Mennonite Church, Rebecca Yoder Neufeld '74 created a new program to assist a growing number of Goshen Community Schools' K-12 students who were living in households where English was not the primary language.

Collaborations among Rebecca, Chandler Elementary School Principal B.J. Miller '57 and others — first volunteer, then grant-funded — positioned Goshen Community Schools to be ahead of the curve as it adapted to what would soon become a dramatic enrollment increase of such students. In 1979, the college's Education Department received national recognition for preparing its students to teach in bilingual/bicultural programs.

Whether volunteer or paid, in school classrooms or church basements, many GC students, faculty and alumni continue to invest skills and time to strengthen English language capacities among newcomers to Elkhart County and elsewhere.

Pictured: In 1978, to complete her junior field work requirement in college, Brenda Hostetler Meyer '79 (left) tutored Hispanic students, including Carmen Alvarado (right) at Chandler Elementary School in Goshen, where Brenda herself had attended years earlier. Brenda later served as director of Goshen Community School's English as a New Language (ENL) program, beginning in 1989 in a one-third-time position with two half-time teachers assisting. When she left in 1996, she was serving full-time with 15 other teachers working in the program. Currently, one-third of students in Goshen Community Schools are English Language Learners and the district has the largest program in the state for a school district of its size.

THE MAGAZINE OF GOSHEN COLLEGE | SPRING / SUMMER 2021

BY REBECCA J. STOLTZFUS '83, president

Rooted in the way of Jesus

BEING ROOTED IS POWERFUL. Roots provide physical anchoring, lifegiving water, nourishment and reproduction. It is no wonder that being rooted is also a Biblical idea. Jesus himself sprang up from the stump of Jesse, from whose roots "a branch will bear fruit." (Isaiah 11:1). Paul writes to the Ephesians: "And I pray you, being rooted and grounded in love, may have power. . ." (Ephesians 3:17-18)

Goshen College, as we say in our mission statement, is "shaped by Anabaptist-Mennonite tradition." Our Anabaptist-Mennonite respect for all persons shapes our commitment to nonviolence, sustainability and our participatory organizational culture, as well as our love of singing and the simple architectural styles of our buildings. But much more importantly and powerfully, our tradition roots us in the way of Jesus — not only in our beliefs about who Jesus is, but the ways we live as students and followers of his teachings, acts and life.

As we crafted our new mission statement, we strove to embrace our particular tradition and also to be inclusive and ecumenical within our Christ-centeredness. "Shaped by Anabaptist-Mennonite tradition, we integrate academic excellence with real-world learning and active love for God and neighbor." Our mission echoes Jesus's distillation of all the law and the prophets: love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind, and love your neighbor as you love yourself (Matthew 22:36-40). We embrace active love not as sidedressing, but as an integral part of our excellence.

A recent nationally representative research project by the Fetzer Institute found that 86 percent of people in the United States consider themselves to be spiritual to some extent, and a majority of people also aspire to be more spiritual, engage in at least one spiritual or religious activity each week, and describe spiritual people in positive terms. Furthermore, people who describe themselves as spiritual are more likely to be civically engaged and want to make a difference in their communities. The authors report: "Human beings yearn for a spirituality that will root us in the love, courage and hope that we need to build our lives and communities." Goshen College connects with that contemporary yearning.

I am convinced that the present and future vitality of Goshen College hinges on our vision to be manifestly "rooted in the way of Jesus," not theoretically and historically, but actively and presently. So that we may have power "together with all the Lord's holy people, to grasp how wide and long and high and deep is the love of Christ, and to know this love that surpasses knowledge — that [we] may be filled to the measure of all the fullness of God." (Ephesians 3:18)

About the cover

What better represents this issue's theme of faith and learning at Goshen College than the lamp and book from our seal? It is illustrated diversely on the cover by Hannah Gerig Meyer '08, our graphic designer, with contributions from her 7-year-old daughter Gracie as well as graduating art majors Esmeralda Bucio '21 (Elkhart, Indiana), Dianna Campos '21 (Goshen), Meghna Das '21 (Mussororie, India), Heather Gabel '21 (Orange City, Iowa), Nathan Pauls '21 (Kinzers, Pennsylvania) and Naomi Tolmachoff '21 (Goodyear, Arizona). The lit lamp represents the light of learning that, in a world of darkness, provides illumination. The book symbolizes the importance of the written word, especially holy Scripture. Together, they represent that Goshen College is a place of light and of enlightenment, a place where faith and learning connect in deep and diverse ways. The actual lamp and book (pictured above, at commencement) used to be passed from the graduating senior class to the junior class in a ceremony. Now, graduates sign the book after receiving their degrees in a commencement ceremony tradition that links generations of alumni in the spirit of "Culture for Service" and extends the light of faith and learning to future students.

CONNECT GOSHEN DAY

On Connect Goshen Day (April 13, 2021), in addition to 413 donors generously giving $144,430, alumni and friends shared their memories and photos that reminded them of their connection to GC. Here are just a few that were shared! Visit goshen.edu/GCconnects to see more.

Here is a picture of the Sophomore Comets, the 1952-53 girl's basketball team, submitted by Carolyn Smith Diener '55 (pictured in the middle)

The Rychener GC 7! This is a photo from a Christmas gathering with our parents, Earl and Helen (Frey) Rychener, in Pettisville. At that time, the three oldest children had already graduated from GC. There was at least one sibling on campus from 1960-82, except for a four-year period in the 70s.

Shirley Hildebrand Hsu '69

I came to Goshen in 1968 as a missionary on home study leave. Having lived in Taiwan for six years, I was exempt from the new SST requirement, but I felt the excitement of the first units going abroad that fall. In the meantime, I dealt with a sort of culture shock (Canadian citizen, part of my heart in Taiwan, older than most of my classmates). With the exception — thankfully — of a few other mature female students, meaningful conversations with the students I met seemed impossible. Most knew little about Canada and even less about Taiwan and were not curious to learn more. I felt particularly lonely in the dining room.

In January, the first SST units returned to campus and suddenly I began to meet students who were excited to share their cross-cultural experiences and to hear about mine. It was wonderful to see how a few months in another culture had opened their eyes and given them the desire to engage the larger world.

Goshen College did a wonderful thing when they initiated the Study Service Trimester abroad! Thank you — and blessings on the next 50 years of opening eyes and hearts!

(L to R): Taylor Rex '21, Rianna Koteles '21, Taylar McKinley '21, Makayla Collier '21. All will graduate from GC this month.

Having fun during the April 1974 GC Chorale tour to Michigan and Ontario. The photo features choir members Darrel Miller '75 and Sid Richard '76. Photo from Bill Clemens '75.

How could I possibly choose just one photo to share for Connect Goshen Day? All of these life-long friendships and college experiences unique to GC (SST, IBS "Best College Radio Station" award, kick off and biking around campus) were so important to me and are some of the many reasons why I've come back to work at Goshen College. #GCconnects

Grants support community engaged learning and partnerships in Elkhart County

Goshen College has received more than $4 million in grants from Lilly Endowment Inc. and the Community Foundation of Elkhart County to support a five-year plan for expanding inclusive education in Elkhart County through community-engaged learning and partnerships.

"As a nationally-ranked baccalaureate college, we are ready to claim that local community engagement will be a hallmark of a Goshen College education," said President Rebecca Stoltzfus '83.

With these grants, the Goshen College will develop a new Office for Community Engaged Learning, which will build programs that are educationally rigorous for students, create belonging and inclusion for students historically underserved, and are mutually rewarding for the college's partners in the local community.

This includes outreach to low-income, school-age students and adult learners, particularly in the predominantly Black and Latino communities of south-central Elkhart and north Goshen.

This network of partnerships will include educational partnerships such as Elkhart Community Schools and Goshen Community Schools, Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Ivy Tech, Bluffton (Ohio) University, as well as facilitating partnerships with Community Foundation of Elkhart County, Horizon Educational Alliance and South Bend-Elkhart Regional Partnership.

$4+ MILLION

Stoltzfus appointed to second presidential term

The Board of Directors unanimously appointed President Rebecca Stoltzfus '83 to a second term of five years beginning July 1, 2021. Stoltzfus, who began her first term as the college's 18th president in November 2017, responded to the invitation to reappointment without hesitation. "I am grateful and enthusiastic to continue the vital work we have begun and are doing together," she said.

"We have heard overwhelming affirmation from all for her calm, positive, challenging, insightful, joyful, confident and authentic leadership and spirit," said Dr. Bruce Stahly '67, the chair of the board of directors. "The board strongly believes that Rebecca is the right leader for Goshen College at this time and that we are very fortunate to have her in this role."

Students get hands-on experience vaccinating peers in clinics

Students gained valuable real-world experience and helped slow the spread of COVID-19 by administering vaccines to students and employees during vaccination clinics the college held on campus April 1-2 and April 22-23 (pictured below).

About 15 undergraduate nursing students administered vaccines, while about a dozen public health students organized, registered and scheduled follow-up appointments for those getting vaccinated.

Nursing faculty members drew up the vaccines and oversaw the process along with an emergency observer from Goshen Health to make sure everything ran smoothly as the future nurses administered the Pfizer vaccine to about 300 people.

"Our purpose is to promote the health of people and our community," said Jewel Yoder '99, '21 (DNP), associate professor and chair of the department of nursing. "This was an experience where nursing students could practice some clinical skills and feel that they were contributing to the greater good of our community."

Seniors become published authors

Patrick Webb, a writing major from Goshen, released "Lady Luck and the Monorail Conspiracy," a superhero origin story featuring noir elements and focusing on American comic-strip character Lady Luck, who appeared in comics throughout the '40s.

Laura Miller, a writing and Spanish major from Arlington, Kansas, released a collection of poetry titled "Growing Up a Sunflower" about her experience growing up in Kansas.

Emmy Rupp, a social work major from Wooster, Ohio, released a book of poems titled "These Sacred Fractures," in which she processes her own experiences, beliefs and observations.

Mackenzie Miller, a English and journalism major from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, released "存在: In Search of Presence," written in both English and Mandarin and drawing from a gap year she lived and studied in Nanjing, China.

To order a copy of any of these books, email pinchpennypress@goshen.edu.

Student-produced documentary tells story of Goshen Jewish family who saved lives during Holocaust

A feature-length documentary titled "Vital Passage," filmed and edited by Goshen College students and faculty, premiered on April 9 at the Goshen Theater to a select audience. The film chronicles the amazing story of David Plaut and his son, Sidney, Jewish merchants in Goshen, who risked their business and livelihood to provide a passage for 28 Jewish refugees escaping the Holocaust.

Starting in 2017, it took 20 Goshen College students working more than 1,000 hours to outline, research and produce this hour-long film, under the direction of Kyle Hufford, associate professor of communication and FiveCore Media's executive director (pictured below).

David Plaut and his son Sidney owned Plaut's Dry Goods Store in Goshen, Indiana, which operated for 85 years, from 1906 through 1991. The recent discovery of a lockbox hidden in the basement of the former Plaut's Dry Goods Store by Sidney's grandson, Steve Gruber, would unlock their seventy year old secret. The official documents found inside revealed the scope of the Plaut's story of rescue, sacrifice and courage. Learn more at: fivecoremedia.com/vitalpassage

Survey shows students positive about in-person learning during pandemic

Students expressed higher satisfaction than their peers at other similar colleges regarding their experience in the fall semester during the COVID-19 pandemic, according to a recent national survey.

The survey of 28 small, mostly liberal arts colleges, developed by the Higher Education Data Sharing Consortium (HEDS), sought to measure student experiences in the classroom and on campus in an unusual semester.

"Despite the challenges this year, our student survey results show that students found it easy to follow the public health guidelines put at place at GC, and also were especially satisfied with campus life services," said Justin Heinzekehr '06, director of institutional research and assessment. "These results are encouraging and reflect the great effort that everyone at GC has made to create a vibrant and safe campus environment in the middle of a pandemic. Compared with similar schools across the country, GC students expressed much more satisfaction with their ability to participate on campus."

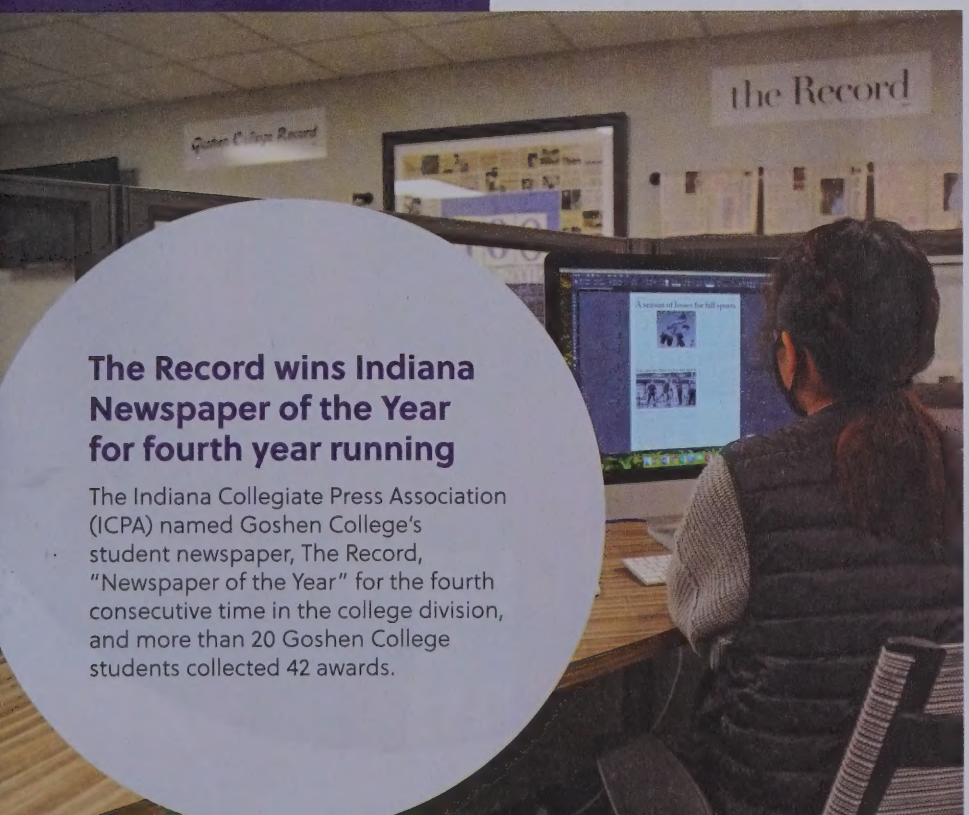
GC again named Indiana Radio School of the Year

Goshen College's student-run radio station, 91.1 FM The Globe (WGCS) received the Indiana Association of School Broadcasters (IASB) "Radio School of the Year" award for the third consecutive time, along with a flurry of awards in ten of 13 categories. The Globe also received 29 award nominations and five first-place awards at the 81st annual Intercollegiate Broadcasting System's (IBS) Multimedia Conference, more than any other school in the competition. Fifteen students also shared six awards from the Broadcast Education Association (BEA).

College improves on STARS silver sustainability rating

Goshen College has improved this past year on its STARS (Sustainability Tracking, Assessment and Rating System) silver rating from the Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education (AASHE) — bringing GC closer to a gold rating.

This is Goshen's third STARS report, following submissions in 2011 and 2014. With more than 900 participants in 40 countries, AASHE's STARS program is the most widely recognized framework in the world for publicly reporting comprehensive information related to a college or university's sustainability performance. Participants report achievements in five overall areas: academics, engagement, operations, planning and administration, and innovation and leadership.



The Record wins Indiana Newspaper of the Year for fourth year running

The Indiana Collegiate Press Association (ICPA) named Goshen College's student newspaper, The Record, "Newspaper of the Year" for the fourth consecutive time in the college division, and more than 20 Goshen College students collected 42 awards.

The 223 members of the Goshen College Class of 2021 were honored in a hybrid in-person and virtual commencement ceremony on April 25, 2021. Watch it at goshen.edu/graduation.

Dr. Erica Albertin named new Athletic Director

Dr. Erica Albertin was named the college's new athletic director on April 19. She has been at the college since 2016 as head athletic trainer and an administrator, including serving as interim athletic director on two occasions.

In announcing Albertin's hiring, Dr. Gilberto Pérez Jr., vice president for student life, said, "We are excited to welcome Dr. Erica Albertin to the athletic director position, particularly because she understands the health and mental health of our student-athletes. Her ability to lead our athletic department in a holistic manner will serve us well in the coming years."

Albertin is a 2009 graduate of Manchester University and holds a doctorate from the University of Idaho. She is GC's second female athletic director to oversee both men's and women's athletics and the first since 1996.

Before coming to Goshen, Albertin worked at Dominican University in Illinois from 2012 to 2016, serving as assistant athletic trainer and then head athletic trainer. She also worked for Athletico Physical Therapy in the Chicago area.

In addition to her work in the college setting, Albertin has worked as an athletic trainer with the United States women's national soccer team and has presented at regional and national athletic training conventions. Her articles have appeared in the Journal of Sport Rehabilitation and the Journal of Rehabilitation Sciences & Research.

Where faith and learning connect

What sets Goshen College apart from almost all of the other thousands of colleges and universities? One needs only to look as far as our mission statement for the answer: "Shaped by Anabaptist-Mennonite tradition, we integrate academic excellence and real-world experience with active love for God and neighbor."

This is a place where faith and learning connect, and where each profoundly informs the other. In a broken world that longs for better questions and new answers, we believe that graduating students prepared to go out and to engage the complexity with both wisdom and wonder is just what is needed.

You might wonder: What does that look like? How does it happen? How does that impact our graduates? Hear from a few of our graduating seniors, our professors and our alumni for a glimpse of their experiences.

STUDENTS

How has your faith been shaped or influenced at GC?

Genevieve Cowardin '21

Lancaster, Pennsylvania

MAJOR: nursing

"When I think about my faith growth at GC, Study-Service Term (SST) comes to mind. In the fall of 2018, I went to Peru for my SST. It was a whirlwind of new experiences and unexpected challenges. I was surrounded by a supportive community, yet my feeling of disconnection remained. The language barrier frustrated me, and I felt overwhelmed with my incompetence. However, I unearthed new strength in my faith. I relied heavily on John 14:27, "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give to you. Not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid." I looked for spaces in my life where I could find Jesus' peace. I understood that this peace would not always come in the way that I desired, but it would come in the way that I needed. I felt it in the soft, cool waters of the waterfall where I swam with fellow SSTers. I sensed it in the comfort found by trusting my host mom's intuition and her hospitality. I heard it in the hymns that I sang with a friend by the river. For the first time in my life, I found myself fully trusting in God's grace and promise to provide."

"Global social and environmental justice movements have one thing in common, they fight for the basic humanity and love of people in the world. The Mennonite contexts I grew up in disagreed with the common sentiment of love for all people of the world. Faith is not about dehumanizing individuals and communities by telling them they are straying from God's path. Faith is about humanizing diverse people and communities with love, kindness and welcome.

My faith drives my interests and abilities to solve sustainability problems and fight for social and environmental justice. Recently, I've applied these interests to my work in the Sunrise Movement and academic work on western collaboration with indigenous communities. Next year, I will continue to pursue my interests in sustainability and find new ways to fight for justice by enrolling in the Arizona State Master of Arts in Sustainability program.

Folks in the church not only have an obligation to be global citizens, but they must also break down harmful structures like purity culture, racism, colonization, homophobia and patriarchy embedded in the church. Let's have a conversation about purity culture, let's have a coffee and discuss Asian hate, let's go to a Black Lives Matter protest, let's fight for justice in the name of love."

When I first came to GC as a freshman, I had no intention of majoring in Bible and religion. I had spent most of high school struggling with my faith, and I was ready to be done with that. I didn't need Bible and religion classes complicating my life.

Unfortunately, it wasn't that easy. It only took half a semester before I'd added Bible and religion as a major (I'm still not quite sure how that happened). I started asking those big questions again, just like I had in high school. This time, though, I had courses and professors that could give me answers.

How foolish I was. They didn't give me answers — they just left me with even more questions. Luckily, with each class, I became more and more comfortable with ambiguity. I learned to embrace the strange space of unknowing that comes with any study of religion.

I am incredibly grateful to those professors who did not have the answers. They taught me that I could have these big questions and believe the things I believed and still call myself a Christian. Realizing that has helped me to find my faith again.

Questioning has always been a key part of my faith life. Growing up, my parents cultivated a curiosity in me that asked questions about the world around me and the people with whom I interacted. Each question led to a new, more complicated question about existence.

The point of asking questions is not to find easy answers, but is about revealing something about the Divine or about human relationships. The point of faith is not about having everything figured out, but about believing there is something greater than just me without knowing for certain. Faith is about asking hard questions about life and existence, and finding a community that will ask and discuss questions with you.

In the darkest times of my life, it has been the questions that keep pushing me. Resilience comes from the community of friends I have built at Goshen College. It is those friends that have supported and believed in me when I haven't been able to support or believe in myself. Resilience comes from the God who has promised to surround me in love no matter how many questions or doubts I may have. Resiliency in faith doesn't mean never questioning what you believe. In fact, it is the questioning that leads to resilience.

My faith has shaped me in a way that I saw many different ways to approach faith, whether it was by witnessing different religious practices or discovering new things about a culture or religion that my colleagues believed in. Another way that my faith shaped me into who I am today was because of my involvement with Unity, Student Ministries Team, Parables and GC choirs. Being in these groups have been a blessing and a learning curve during my college journey. I am grateful for the opportunity to allow my faith to grow by being part of these wonderful things that GC has and can help plant seeds in those who want their faith to continue growing.

FACULTY

How do you bring faith and learning together in your classroom?

Andrew Hartzler '98

Professor of Accounting

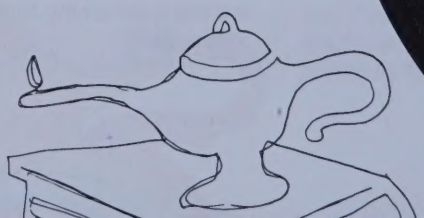
"For me, my faith is an inseparable part of who I am. Faith is not about a set of tenets, a rigid set of rules, it is intricately connected to the design of who we are as human beings. The goodness of God is woven into the fabric of who we are. In the course of our lives that fabric gets torn and dirtied at times, but the imprint of God is there, always waiting to be revealed.

The essence of who God is to me is embodied in the kindness, compassion, joy and love we find in our human experience. When I enter the classroom, I am keenly aware of the fact that I am in the presence of other human beings who are simultaneously broken and beautiful. Each day I look for ways to share a transparent, raw, and authentic kindness, compassion and joy with these young people with whom I've crossed paths. As badly as I want each moment in the classroom to be joy filled, I recognize that we all go through dark times and struggle. It is when I see that darkness (stress, issues with family/friends, etc.) welling up in my students or in myself I name the light that faith is for me in those moments. I encourage them to pursue the light that the darkness can never extinguish."

Dr. Julia Schiavone Camacho

Associate Professor of History

"My first years teaching at a Christian college have been an exercise in shedding secular ways and getting used to bringing my whole self to teaching. After attending Catholic schools for most of K-12, my higher education experience both as a student and later as a professor was secular, until I started teaching at Goshen College. It has been a revelation, and a meaningful part of my faith journey to be able to discuss spirituality and to invite students to pray or meditate and share from their journeys in certain situations. In some of my classes we have the opportunity to consider how faith, spirituality and religion have shaped human history. In seeking new ways to integrate faith and learning, as I go forward, I have been considering how I could make deeper, structural changes that draw on the ways my faith and identity as a Catholic who is teaching at a Mennonite institution informs the deeper roots of each course I teach at GC."



Dr. Julie Reese

Professor of Psychology

"How do I bring faith and learning together? Each morning, I read the Bible, pray, and ask God to prepare me to share His truth and love. My discipline, psychology, naturally involves values, behaviors and relationships, fruitful areas to discuss how humans have inherent value and responsibility as image-bearers of God. I try to point out the "what is" in the world as opposed to the "what ought" in the Word. I seek to highlight how psychological findings often align with the message of the Bible. Since the beginning of the psychology major, Senior Seminar has been a required course where we discuss explicit issues of faith and psychology. Students select topics ranging from forgiveness to prayer in therapy to religious abuse and beyond. They lead the discussion, where all do readings in preparation for class, and I join in as a participant. Students have expressed deep appreciation for the space to discuss and wrestle with such issues in an academic context, beyond just sharing personal opinions. As I enter my third decade of teaching, I am more intentional in bringing faith into the classroom. I begin each Friday with part of a Psalm and a prayer, emphasizing the invitation to have faith conversations with me outside of class."

Dr. Matthew Hill

Professor of Music

"This is my beloved Son, listen to him!" Thus spoke God at the moment of the Transfiguration. Music is a means of listening to Him who is the fullness of truth, life and beauty. It can act as a type of "real presence" whereby the mystery of God's eternal wonder can be sensed through the beauty of meaningful sound. This reality of music's ever deepening ability to communicate is what allows me to profoundly unite my Catholic faith with the teaching of the art of music.

Since antiquity, music has been associated with an otherworldliness, with liturgical form, with worship and in all cultures, as expressing the totality and mystery which makes up our humanity. Music gives evidence to the infinite — a form of expression that is ever deepening. Gregorian chant, the symphonies of Beethoven and the operas of Verdi puts us in contact with a "presence" that makes us aware of that which is greater than ourselves. Music asks "Who do you say that I am?!" So powerful for students, and all of us, to grapple with this question. We do this through daily practice, through study, through listening, in silence and ultimately in performance, where its meaningfulness reminds us, that the beauty we encounter is only a gentle preparation for that which God has in store for those who love."

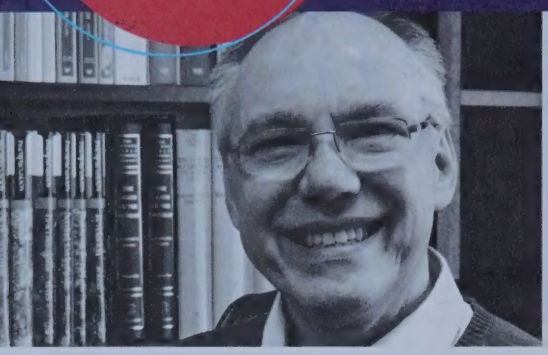
Listen to the experience of alums working in ministry



Ryan Ahlgrim '79

Richmond, Virginia

MAJOR: English

Pastor, First Mennonite Church of Richmond

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

GC helped me develop a philosophy that integrated science, sociology, history, art, literature, biblical studies and theology into a coherent vision for serving the world. I have brought this powerful integration into my ministry.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

Communicating Jesus' message and ministry in creative and effective ways, bringing about healing, meaning and vision for the congregation.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

The church needs leaders who are emotionally mature, self-starters, compassionate, creative and crazy about God. Don't try to save people; just serve them and rest in God.

Marilyn Rudy-Froese '85

Kitchener, Ontario

MAJOR: social work

Church leadership minister, Mennonite Church Eastern Canada

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

Both my major in social work and the integration of faith and service in the world prepared me to hear a call to ministry. I'm grateful for my social work degree and how it provided a good foundation for my ministry.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

I have the privilege of walking with people exploring their call to ministry and discerning vocational transitions. Being in leadership at the denominational level is also energizing as I envision what it means to lead the church today.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

Use every opportunity to test your call and your gifts. Get to know your area conference/regional church minister, so that they know you, and you have a sense of any opportunities for ministry.

Richard Wineland '90

Nashville, Tennessee

MAJOR: music

Episcopal priest, Christ Church Cathedral and St. Augustine's Chapel at Vanderbilt University

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

At Goshen College I was introduced, for the first time, to the history and theology of the Radical Reformation. I learned about the churches of the Historic Peace Church tradition, and was challenged by their commitment to radical discipleship.

What gives you the most s atisfaction in your work?

The arts have always been a significant part of my priestly ministry, and I enjoy finding new and authentic musical expressions that compliment the ancient liturgy.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

Volunteer in your local congregation! True pastoral ministry occurs only in the context of caring relationships and in humbly serving others. Listen carefully to people's faith stories, and to the voice of God in your heart. Then follow your passion.

Malinda Berry '96

Elkhart, Indiana

MAJORS: history, English

Associate professor of theology and ethics, Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

Attending GC was very instrumental in shaping my work in theological education. Experiences both inside and outside the classroom expanded my understanding of violence raising important questions about how we are and aren't "people of God peace."

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

I approach scholarship as a form of what we Mennonites call "discipleship," so I'm interested in how Christian faith makes it possible for us to live meaningful lives because it's an interesting topic AND my scholarship helps me do my personal work.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

We think of ministry as something we do to help others, but it's really a dialogue between me (and my stuff), those I "minister to" and how we're all trying to meet our needs for connection. So, be as curious about yourself as you are about others!

Shawn Gerber '99

Bloomington, Indiana

MAJOR: Bible and religion

Director of spiritual care and chaplaincy services, Indiana University Health-South Central Region

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

I am deeply grateful for professors that were not only interested in academic education, but they took an interest in me as a person. My Study-Service Term experience in Costa Rica helped shape my worldview in how God was experienced and faith was practiced.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

To see how God provides hope, meaning and wholeness to people who are facing the pain and challenges of illness, and even suffering. I am also blessed in developing meaningful pastoral relationships with employees of all disciplines and walks of life.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

Take advantage of the opportunities to serve and explore your calling through ministry experiences: all-campus worship, drama/worship teams, Ministry Inquiry Program, etc.

Develop various prayer practices that sustain you and help you discern.

Mandy Yoder '99

Goshen, Indiana

MAJORS: Bible and religion, psychology

Pastor, Belmont Mennonite Church

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

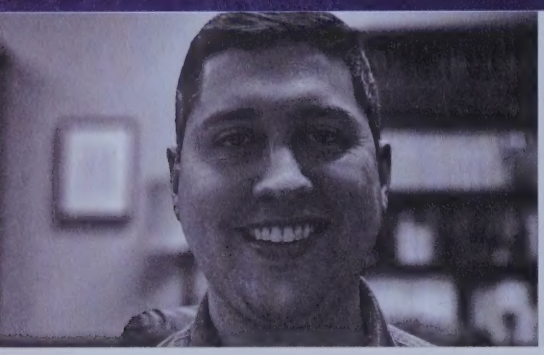
Doing the Ministry Inquiry Program during the summer after my junior year is what made me consider becoming a pastor. I loved every part of that experience, and when the summer was over, I decided to go to seminary to continue exploring my call.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

I love the variety of tasks that are part of my job. Every day is a little different. I love getting to know people deeply over years of life together. It is also an incredible honor to walk with people through times of great joy and deep pain.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

Do something concrete to explore your interest. Do the Ministry Inquiry Program. Shadow a local pastor. Go to seminary. Get a spiritual director. Talk to people who know you well. Pay attention to how you feel when you are engaging in ministry tasks.



Jeff Hochstetler '08

Berlin, Ohio

MAJORS: business, history

Lead pastor at Berlin Mennonite Church

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

Goshen College provided opportunities for me to test the call to ministry through the Ministry Inquiry Program, campus worship night and participating in Morning Song, a student outreach of College Mennonite Church.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

I am satisfied to know that the church exists to proclaim God's reign; the world as many see it isn't the world as it was created to be. I enjoy the variety of the work, whether visiting church members or teaching a class on Jesus' way of peace.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

Listen when others acknowledge your ministerial gifts. Pay attention to what God says to you. Explore the variety of ministry opportunities available to see what might interest you, then volunteer at that organization.

Hillary Watson '09

Ypsilanti, Michigan

MAJORS: Bible, religion & philosophy

Pastor, Shalom Community Church; Program consultant, Nonprofit Enterprise at Work

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

Goshen allowed me to explore the breadth of the Anabaptist tent and find my place in it. Goshen also supported me with opportunity, funding, connections and learning opportunities over my four years.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

I'll be honest, it's not always satisfying, and satisfaction won't sustain you for the long haul. But I love watching people change — their minds, their behaviors, their vocations — because of the way they've encountered God in community.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

Make sure you are well-funded! It is too easy to enter ministry with a heavy debt load or end up struggling financially because you're being underpaid. Negotiate your salary, ask for funding for seminary and advocate for yourself!

Quinn Brenneke '14

Elkhart, Indiana

MAJORS: communication, interdisciplinary studies

Co-pastor, Prairie Street Mennonite Church

How did your experience at Goshen College inform your vocational calling and/or approach to ministry?

I encountered Anabaptism for the first time at Goshen College. You can read about it in books, but you really don't know Anabaptism until you feel it. I felt it at Goshen. It's alive in the community — knowing, being and doing faith all at once.

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

God's kingdom is breaking into the world in surprising and unexpected ways. The church today gets to be witness to the new thing that God is doing and it may be different than what we've ever seen. Understanding it all can be hard work, but holy.

What advice would you have for GC students interested in ministry?

The church benefits from all kinds of gifts. Anything God gives you can be used in ministry. Take time to explore and develop gifts, and be aware of how God might use them for the kingdom.

We are glad to share our new vision for diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) at Goshen College, finalized in May 2021. It grew out of a 2020 recommendation by the college's Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) Task Force, involved broad campus input and engagement, and informs our forthcoming strategic plan. It is an outgrowth of our faith and central to our learning*.*

Our vision for diversity, equity and inclusion at Goshen College

Why is this important?

At Goshen College, our diversity is essential to our academic excellence and vibrant community. As we teach, learn and seek truth together, our diversity invites us to see in new ways, to recognize new problems, to imagine new solutions, to realize our strengths and to claim justice. Only in working together toward inclusion, connection and equity do we gain the knowledge and skills needed to succeed in life, leadership and service, and to create a more just, civil and joyful society.

Arising from Anabaptist-Mennonite faith tradition, we value and honor the inherent dignity of each person. Teaching and learning about diversity and through our diversity connects our academic excellence, real world experience, and active love for God and neighbor. This leads us to continually enrich and grow the diversity of our students, faculty and staff.

What do we mean?

We seek to understand, engage and celebrate our diversity, meaning all the ways that people are both different and similar. Diversity has many dimensions that intersect in a wide variety of ways; these include, for example, race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, age, language, intellect, culture, religion, disability, mental and physical health, class and immigration status. Equity means an intentional focus to reduce disparities in opportunities, experiences and outcomes for all members of the campus community. And inclusion means belonging to a campus environment in which people are respected, accepted and connected to one another.

How will we do this?

As we intentionally integrate diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) throughout our mission and operations, we continually strive to increase our awareness of how aspects of our campus culture facilitate or impede our efforts, and to address historical and current manifestations of bias and exclusion. We want to be known as a place where people go out of their way to learn to know one another and where all campus members feel at home — in our classrooms, departments, residence halls, religious life, event venues, athletic facilities and work spaces.

To advance this vision, we will make DEI awareness, knowledge and skills-building an integral part of the GC educational experience for all of us — our leadership, employees and students. This means having the courage to acknowledge our history and break through our silence, our shame and our fear about racism, sexism, ableism, classism and other forms of discrimination and bias. This call for transformation will always be our ongoing work in progress, and we commit to continually improve our trustworthiness and accountability.

Students share God's love with congregations in person and virtually

FOR MANY YEARS, Goshen College has connected with congregations through our student worship ensemble, Parables. They are amazing ambassadors for Goshen College and of God's love, offering a window into the depth of Christian faith that our students bring to their lives and their community, through their musical and other gifts.

I had the opportunity to coordinate Parables for several years, scheduling them in churches and planning all their travel and lodging details. I also was their bus driver and had the privilege of seeing them perform more than 20 times each year in churches and other settings.

I loved seeing how the students who make up Parables grew in their diverse spiritual journeys and built a small community of faithful support with one another. I also thoroughly enjoyed watching them interact with the groups gathered before, during and after their program.

As with almost everything else, this past year put in-person worship opportunities to the side. Rather than lose a year of energy, Marcia Yost, our director of the arts, and Joanne Gallardo '06, our campus pastor, pivoted and worked with Parables to create a virtual worship service entitled Vessels, based on II Corinthians 4:7. The 45-minute videotaped service includes music, drama, scripture and readings, and can be used at no cost by congregations to give a break to weary pastoral leaders and worship leaders.

There is still so much uncertainty moving forward, but Yost said she hopes Parables can be "back on the road again and able to start visiting churches at some safe point during the fall."

Are you interested in learning more about Parables, accessing their virtual worship program or having them come to your congregation when that is an option? Visit goshen.edu/parables. You will not regret connecting with these amazing faith ambassadors.

Rafael Barahona '01 pursues inclusion and equality with design

Rafael Barahona '01 is using his graphic design skills as a lament for injustice and a message of equality. His design brings together the names of African Americans killed during encounters with law enforcement, which form the word "Beloved."

Barahona's design began as a graphic he posted to Facebook following the murder of George Floyd in May 2020, and after friends suggested it go onto a T-shirt, he decided to print and sell the shirts to raise money for the South Bend Black Lives Matter organization. He has since sold hundreds of shirts with the design on them.

"In each case they're a mother, father, sister, brother, friend," Barahona told Anabaptist World in April. "I made this graphic because when I was thinking about our core identity, what holds us in common, I kept coming back to the fact that we are all beloved children of God."

Stefon Luckey '15, councilman and teacher, is a voice for youth

Stefon Luckey '15 has found himself balancing being a member of the Cassopolis (Michigan) Village Council, a seventh-grade teacher at Cassopolis Middle School and a coach for the district's girls basketball program.

Luckey, who grew up in Cassopolis and became a local basketball star, is in the top-10 record books for both season and career assists as a Maple Leaf. In addition to being a star on the court in high school and college, he earned his teaching degree at GC.

Following college, Luckey spent about five years traveling the world as a professional basketball player, including in Florida, Canada, Taiwan and Australia.

"Going overseas, you end up mentoring kids from across the world," Luckey said in an interview with the Cassopolis Vigilant newspaper. "I've always been able to connect to the youth, and playing internationally allowed me to get into mentorship full force."

When he returned to his hometown last year, he started teaching at Cassopolis Middle School and began coaching boys and girls basketball.

When a seat opened up on the Cassopolis Village Council, he felt like he could make a difference in the community, and was soon sworn in as a trustee. In November, Luckey ran for his seat in the election and won a four-year term.

"I want to inspire the next generation of young leaders to dream big," he said.

Dayna Baxter '18 pilots program to pair social workers with police

Dayna Baxter '18 is behind a new program that will pair social workers with law enforcement to support victims of domestic violence in South Bend, Indiana.

"Many times, I would work with a survivor weeks or months after they reported the abuse to the police and some victims never took action past the initial police call," Baxter, a social worker herself, said. "As a result, I began researching programs that housed social workers with law enforcement and planning a new program to close the gap in services."

In January 2020, she pitched her idea to the St. Joseph County Police Department (SJCPD) sheriff. He immediately agreed to partner with Baxter and the Family Justice Center, the non-profit that she works for, to seek funding and allow her to pilot the program in his department.

Just nine months later, in October 2020, SJCPD was awarded the $407,000 federal grant to create the SJCPD Domestic Violence Incident Response and Support Team. Through this grant, Baxter is now able to respond to domestic violence calls along with a county police officer. Baxter's role is the Victim Services Supervisor, but she will also deliver direct services.

Baxter credits her education at Goshen College with helping prepare her well for this significant initiative.

"My experience at Goshen College undoubtedly set me on the path to developing this new program," Baxter said.

IN MEMORIAM

DOUG WELLENREITER

Assistant Baseball Coach

(1956-2020)

Doug Wellenreiter, assistant baseball coach, passed away suddenly on November 17, 2020, at age 63. He was in his seventh season of coaching at Goshen College.

At Goshen, Wellenreiter coached first base for four and a half years before shifting to the third-base box partway through the 2019 season. He was also the team's chief scheduler.

Head Coach Alex Childers said, "Doug's passion and enthusiasm for Goshen College baseball, athletics, the institution and community were second to none. Doug cared so deeply about the men he coached, not just in terms of baseball players but as people."

Wellenreiter came to GC after spending 35 years teaching and coaching in Illinois, 27 of those as a biology and driver education teacher at Momence High School. He had also coached basketball at the collegiate level as an assistant for Olivet Nazarene University (ONU), was the pitching coach for the Cook County Cheetahs (now the Windy City Thunderbolts) of the Frontier League, and officiated baseball, softball and basketball for 43 years.

Wellenreiter is survived by his wife, Kelly; their two daughters, Brooke and Bria, and their spouses; and 3 grandchildren.

From 1964 to 1978 he was dean of students, and then served as the director of counseling, a role that allowed him to fully engage his training, skills and personal commitment to serving students. Hundreds of Goshen College graduates remember him as a trusted listener and advisor.

During their Goshen College years, the Liechtys undertook numerous international assignments, including leading Study-Service Term in Belize and China, and particularly developed strong ties to South Asia in India and Nepal. RUTH E. GUNDEN '52

Professor Emerita of Physical Education and Director Emerita of International Education

(1930-2021)

Dr. Ruth E. Gunden '52, professor emerita of physical education and director emerita of international education, died on March 25, 2021, in Goshen at age 90.

Gunden served as a professor of physical education from 1953 to 1994, and coached women's basketball, volleyball and tennis. She also served as the director of international education from 1987 through her retirement. The Ruth Gunden Gymnasium in the college's Recreation-Fitness Center and Ruth Gunden Champion of Character Alumni Awards are named in her honor.

Gunden founded the women's basketball team in 1958, the first intercollegiate women's athletic team at GC, nearly 20 years before Title IX mandated equality for women's sports in educational institutions. Gunden became the first woman at GC to lead a Study-Service Term (SST) unit in Jamaica in 1971. In 1977, she became the first female chairperson of the physical education department.

As women's head basketball coach from 1965 to 1988, Gunden compiled a winning record of 123-54, a .695 winning percentage. "In those early days of intercollegiate basketball, the Goshen teams held their own in state and sometimes regional competition with the likes of Indiana University, Purdue and Ohio State," she wrote before her death.

Survivors include a sister, Doris (Carl '55) Metzler '49 of Goshen; a brother, Donald Gunden '50 of Myerstown, Pennsylvania; and a multitude of extended family.

The call to Christian service

BY JOE SPRINGER '80, curator, Mennonite Historical Library

ELIZABETH HERSHBERGER (BAUMAN) '46 welcomed Goshen College students to the 1945-46 academic year with this challenge: "Use your talents, your ambitions and your power, combined with the training you receive here ... in Christian service." Together, she and her future husband Harold Bauman '46 presided over the female and male sections of the Young People's Christian Association (YPCA) — the largest, most active student group on campus.

Incoming first-year student Florence Baynard (Grimes) '49 hailed from Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, expressing interest in preparing for "Christian work." Unlike any other earlier GC student from Lancaster County, Florence was African-American. After a year of coursework, literary society and YPCA activity, and singing in choir, Florence agreed to spend the summer assisting at Bethel Mennonite Church led by James and Rowena Lark in an African-American neighborhood in Chicago. James was the first African-American Mennonite minister, and the couple's daughter Juanita Lark '43 was the first African-American graduate from Goshen College.

Two summers earlier, four Goshen YPCA students had canvassed the Chicago neighborhood to determine a good place for the Larks to begin outreach efforts there. Many other Goshen YPCA students in those years spent summers in other "extension" work — Bible schools in varying socioeconomic areas of Elkhart County, Spanish-language services for Mexican railroad workers in Elkhart, day camps and other activities from Michigan to Arkansas. The call to Christian service propelled others to work in state mental hospitals or cross the ocean for post-war relief work. GC students traveled to Chicago to preach six sermons at Bethel Mennonite Church in May and June 1946. Then in July, Elizabeth joined Florence and the Larks to help with the 90 children participating in six weeks of summer Bible school.

Neither Florence nor Elizabeth would live long enough though to witness the marriage of their respective grandchildren, Charity Grimes '09 and Matthew Bauman '06, or the birth of their shared great-granddaughter Lena '39.

THEN & NOW

A legacy of marine biology

When the dream of an immersive marine biology program for students in Northern Indiana began more than 55 years ago, one could have hardly imagined all that now happens at our J.N. Roth Marine Biology Station in Layton, Florida. Environmental and marine science has become a major with three tracks (ecology, climate science and marine biology) and includes a new Marine Biology Semester to complement the May term marine biology course. And with the growing impact of climate change and the importance of our fragile waterways, such a learning lab in this coral island archipelago is even more critical for tomorrow's environmental leaders.

Pictured: Nick Davis '22 and Madison Miller '23, environmental and marine science majors, hold historic marine bio photos that include Winston Gerig '80, Doug Smucker '80 and David Strycker '80 with the catch of the day, and the J.N. Roth Marine Biology Station built in 1986.
